Kevin Langston is assistant commissioner for the tourism division at the Georgia Department of Economic Development (GDEcD), the state's lead governmental organization for promoting, marketing and supporting economic growth. Kevin will assist Charlie Gatlin, deputy commissioner for tourism and marketing, in leading the tourism division. His responsibilities include working with GDEcD staff and their partners to establish Georgia as a tourism destination.

Mr. Langston returns to the tourism division, after having served as director of GDEcD's international operations and director of projects managing the state's offices in ten locations around the world, including overseeing their work in business recruitment, export development and tourism promotion.

Mr. Langston previously served as assistant deputy commissioner for the tourism division, where he oversaw marketing, sales and product development initiatives. He previously served as director of communications for the agency and in a number of roles in the department's International Trade Division.

He has a diverse background encompassing many aspects of economic development, tourism and marketing.

Originally from northeast Missouri, Mr. Langston graduated with a Bachelor of Architecture degree from Kansas State University and a Master of Business Administration degree from Georgia State University.

Kevin is an active member of the Georgia Economic Developers Association, is a Certified Economic Development Finance Professional (CEDFP) and serves with numerous other industry and civic organizations.
